

KELLER LEGISLATION CLEARS U.S. HOUSE!

BREAKING NEWS!

A recent Gallup poll showed that 89% of Americans agree that these frivolous lawsuits being filed against fast-food restaurants by overweight customers for obesity-related claims are unnecessarily clogging our courtrooms.

The restaurant industry is the largest private sector employer in America, providing jobs to 12 million people across the country.

And with those jobs at stake, that's why Ric wrote The Personal Responsibility in Food Consumption Act, a bill protecting the food industry from those wasteful lawsuits.

Members of the U.S. House of Representatives strongly supported Ric's legislation and approved it with a bipartisan vote of 276-139.

Some radical trial lawyers wanted to sue our restaurants, grocery stores and cookie makers to try and walk away with $47 billion in legal fees while the rest of us get stuck paying higher prices for the foods we buy.

Fortunately, Ric and his colleagues in the U.S. House voted to put an end to this culture in America where everybody blames others for their problems. It's time we sued each other less and cared about each other more.
